Introduction:

There has been a huge increase in the number of widows in India as per the census department India's population in 2011 was 121 crore and of this 4.6% or 5.6 crore are widowed with women outnumbering men by a long way. In 2001 only 18.5 lakh or 0.7% of the then population 102 crore was widows. Among states Kerala and Tamil Nadu have a significant percentage of their population widows. While 6.7% of Kerala's population is widows, Tamil Nadu has 6.4%. All the southern states have significant percentage of their respective population widows. Karnataka and undivided Andhra Pradesh have 5.7% and 6% of the population has widows.

Women are about half of the population of the country, but their situation has been grim. For centuries, they have been deliberately denied opportunities of growth in the name of religion and socio-cultural practices. Before independence women were many abhorrent customs traditional rigidities and vices due to which their status in the society touched its nadir and their situation was all around bleak. They were victims of widespread illiteracy, segregation in the dark and dingy rooms in the name of purdah, forced child marriage, indeterminable widowhood, rigidity of fidelity and prevention violence and force to follow the sati and the complete denial of individuality. Beside the economic dependence early tutelage of their husbands and in-laws, heavy domestic workload which remained unpaid and unrecognised absence of carrier and mobility non recognition of their economic contribution, poor work conditions and wages monotonous jobs which men generally refused to do was also responsible for their pitiable conditions. At the socio political plain, women suffered from their homes, repression and unnatural indoctrination. And they face unequal and inferior status. Rigid caste hierarchy and untouchability. Consequently most women were reduced to dumb cattle and it lead to inhuman beastly life.

Conclusion:

Most fundamentally widows demanded dignity and respect a positive social identity. This is too not an unreasonable demand. But it relates to the image and identity of women in general. This demand cannot be implement through legislation or interventions. The dignity and respect and positive social identity demanded by widows must be granted by Indian society at large. There is a need to create more opportunities for widows to come together and redefine their dignity and rights. And there is need to create more opportunities for the society as a whole as well as policy makers, to listen to widows and hear their demands.
